

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1999. The public sector has become an important employer of people with mental health problems.

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the mental health of people in the public sector. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for mental health care, which includes a commitment to improve the mental health of people in the public sector. The strategy states that 'the government is committed to ensuring that the public sector is a place where people can work safely and effectively, and where their mental health is protected and promoted'.

The strategy also states that 'the government is committed to ensuring that the public sector is a place where people can work safely and effectively, and where their mental health is protected and promoted'.
